Project Overview. Bumblebee solar farm would provide renewable electricity for distribution to the West Burton National Grid Substation. This project will generate energy each year of the proposed 40 years of operational life, while also providing a substantial carbon dioxide savings when compared to generation of electricity by non-renewable sources.

American Bumble Bee (Bombus pensylvanicus) The American bumble bee (B. pensylvanicus; AMBB) belongs to the subgenus Thoracobombus, which includes two other species in North America, B. fervidus and B. californicus (Colla et al. 2011, Koch et al. 2012). AMBB has a black head, three yellow bands on the thorax and a black posterior (Colla et al. 2011).
